

The Skinny, on the “Skinny” Pant

From Armani to the Gap, New York to London, the new must have pant is the “Skinny.” For Winter 2006 Doncaster has joined the ranks of dozens of design houses that are incorporating the “everything old is new again” silhouette into their collections. The fashion world is seeing this as more than just a seasonal trend, but a new stylish staple. This must have now pant has been introduced in Doncaster Sport, in both a color and fabric-black rayon spandex-that will easily transition into any wardrobe.

You may not see it at first glance but the “Skinny” is full of possibilities. I have seen them paired with tanks and oversized knits to ladylike blazers and blouses-all of which work, and all of which can easily be found in Doncaster Fall and Winter. You can tuck them into those great boots that until now, only you have seen from top to bottom, or get even more mileage out of some of those adorable flats we have all been coveting from spring and summer, and of course you could always pair them with those dangerously high heels you have been dying to show off.

The versatility can also be found in what the “Skinny” can do for the form, for some of us who find more confidence in our calves than in our hips, wear this pant with an oversized knit, belted or hanging loose, and tap into the relaxed, chic of the Boho trend. Or for those who perhaps are on the petite side, and prefer not to wear some of the more voluminous pant legs, the “Skinny” offers the perfect opportunity for you to slip on a fabulous little blazer or blouse and those perfect pair of pumps. For the long and lean-go classic, bohemian gamin, reminiscent of a 1950's Audrey Hepburn with a simple black turtleneck and a pair of ballet flats-or go retro and add some bold accessories such as belts, layered necklaces and oversized sunglasses as Edie Sedgwick did in the mid 60's.

We see this silhouette coming back into vogue decade-over-decade, the key to demystify this pant is in seeing the possibilities, play with lengths and layering, use your accessories and show off those shoes!!
